ISSP Site-Specific Considerations

Step 4, Edit View or Planning View

What information belongs in the “Site-Specific Considerations” section of the ISSP?

What makes your school unique that may impact it during an emergency or disaster? There is a place to note that information in the ISSP, which will be especially helpful if the most knowledgeable people on campus are offsite when an emergency occurs. This information can also be useful for first responders. Click on Step 4 and select “Site Specific Considerations” from the menu on the lefthand side of the page.

Site-specific considerations could be information about an uncommon student population, geographic features or layout of the campus, a unique hazard in the community or other items about which you would like to give a “heads-up” to someone new in a leadership role on campus.
